CIA's Peace Work Town Hall's Topic

KERMIT ROOSEVELT

The peacetime operations of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency will be outlined at the Jackson Town Hall lecture in the Michigan Theater at 10:30 a.m. Thursday.

The speaker, Kermit Roosevelt, spent 15 years with the agency.

Because of his traveling schedule, the celebrity luncheon at which he'll also talk, will be held at 11:45 a.m. instead of the usual 12:30, at the Hotel Hayes.

Mr. Roosevelt will be introduced at the theater by Capt. Matt P. Hrebeck, commander of the Jackson State Police Post. He'll be introduced at the luncheon by Mrs. Daniel C. Probert.

Ushers at the theater will be Mrs. Vernon Hart, Mrs. Richard

Richards and Mrs. Nelson Beauman.

Mr. Roosevelt, now an official of the Gulf Oil Corp., was connected with the governmental agency when it was originally known as the Office of the Coordinator of Information, through its wartime activities as the OSS (Office of Strategic Services) to its present function.

From his experiences, he'll explain why four presidents have decided that in a world of cold war and communist subversion such an agency is necessary. He'll discuss such controversial issues as the Bay of Pigs, Guatemala and the U-2 incident.

He is one of only four men to receive the National Security Medal. His award was made by former President Eisenhower.
